THE Stamp Revenue for last month was $11,630, showing a decrease on that February, 1885, of $52.

THE projected mission of Mr E. Colborne to the head of the Red River, does not advance so satisfactorily as it might do, even in official hands. Probably the immediate cause of the delay is the indisposition of Mr Aston, Consul General for Cores, whose absence on leave seemingly necessitated Mr Baber's stay in Scoul as acting Consul General at the Corean capital. So soon as therewith. Mr Aston returns from Home to resume his duties in Secul, Mr Baber will, we prosume, be free for the special duty which official rumour has here assigned to him. The advisability or desirability of this Colong sending a colleague in the prospecting tour, to accompany Mr Baber has, we believe, been mooted; and there can be little doubt but that the idea is a good one. Al though the delegates formerly sent by the Chamber of Commerce have not been successful as they might have been under more favourable circumstances, there can took place on the 26th ultime at Frehe little fear of such a mission being unsuccessful when the official character of Mr gram received on the 27th ult. by his ton, appeared before Mr Mitchell-Innes at Baber's duties is borne in mind. If, therefore, official sanction can be obtained for sending a Hongkong representative in company of Mr Baber's mission, to obtain that kind of information as to markets and produsts most interesting and useful for this Colony, the practical results of such a step would most probably fully justify the expenditure necessary in taking it. The difficulty at the outset would be to get the manbest suited for carrying out this object.

so far as the public have been informed, suppose that the evidence taken was of a confidential kind, and that its publication would not favour the unity amongst the brothren of the Service which should exist. But it is not so easy to comprehend the reasons why the report of the Committee should have been regarded as sacred from the public. The result of the Committee's investigation might have indeed been conveyed in some way to the community, even if it were not convenient that the full report should be published. Some exceedingly valuable advice was, we have reason to believe, given to the Committee as to the only effective modes of dealing with native criminals, and it must have been made manifest to the members that special legislation to meet the special condi- officers and engineers of the Kowshing. tions of Hongkong would never be regarded the native community as an infringement cussion arises upon it; and we are much evidence taken before the Police Com-

An American citizen of the name of John Murray Nelson, despite the provailing anti-American feeling in Canton, has-if the story be told in the Police Court this morning is to be believed -secured to himself the most important function of detective in is now in Hongkong provided with warrants for the arrest of notorious criminals whom their hands on. The 'tall' story which the American tells has a peculiar air of mystery about it, and does not seem to have at first appeared very plausible to the authoritioshere, for they instead of facilitating the operations of Mr Nelson, gave the would-be detective an unsought-for lesson in his profession. Under the rather dishonoring charge of entering a Chinaman's house in Wellington Street and of having behaved in a disorderly manner there, the gentloman, with the important mission from Can the Police Court this morning. From the statement made by the complainant, it Sunday evening, Mr Nelson, accompanied on a charge of having been drunk and disby another European, entered the shop of a Chinese portrait painter, at 59 Wellington Street. His companion, who evidently was a man of artistic tastes, made an inspection of the pictures in complainant's shop, but not finding anything to his taste, had not unduly prolonged his stay. One of the portrait painter's fokis was the special detective, whother attracted by the countenance of the opium smoker or. ment. by the edour of the opium, went alongside the bed and expressed his desire to join the foki in his dissipation. The latter did not ratio to that of the vessels belonging to receive the American's request with favour, but on his handing, over 10 cents brought the portrait painter till after gun-fire telling him he belonged to the Pina Chao Hoi. began to get weary of his visitor's talk and

Campbell was called in. The constable, on arriving, found Mr Nelson sitting on a bench in the shop. On being asked why he did not leave when requested he said he had lost his walking stick in the shop and did not wish to go away without it. He further gave the important personage. He was in the employment of the Viceroy of Canton and was in possession of warrants for the arrest of ceived information that two of them were them had fled to Singapore. The friend who accompanied him he had sent away to fatch his servent to identify the two men he wanted. He also told the Constable that he had seen the Police Magistrate in Hongkong, who was to give him all the assistance he could to have the men arrested. A Hongkong warrant he understood was necessary and he meant to have one. The constable, however, either turned a deaf ear to Mr Nelson, or thought it would be botter that some further light were thrown upon the matter in the Hongkong Police Court to-day. There the American, as stated, was brought this morning and made a statement somewhat similar to the one made in the portrait painter's shop, without getting much more sympathy. under this title in The Times a project formed by a syndicate of German financiers and manufacturers for lending the Chinese a large sum of money, under conditions which could not fail to work serious detriment to the present position and future prospects of English trade with China. Ample time having clapsed since that communication was published for an interchange of views between some of the parties in this country and in China most largely interested in this scheme, it may be well to describe the position at the present moment of the danger in question. At the outset, it is satisfactory to remark that the article has served the sole purpose with which it was written viz, to draw the attention of English financial and manuf Burlington House, Mr W. R. Carles read facturing men to the German acheme, to indicate to them the grave dangers that We have grounds for stating that the pro- lay behind it, and to produce discussion of posed German scheme for raising a loan of such a public character in this country that £35,000,000 has already collapsed, and there | the sound would reach China and there put officials and merchants, Chinese and Bri-A paper entitled Burmah; the Eastern tish, on their guard. Möllendorff's Korean fiasco we hazarded the for the great danger, as I tried to point upinion that his diagrace would only be out, was that this colossal project would be temporary, and events have justified this settled in a hole-and-corner fashion. The powerful official influences at the disposal The London Gazette of 22nd inst, contains of the delegates would be directed to this the subjoined announcement, dated Dec. end; to obtain such an object money would be freely spent, and it would be a The Queen has been graciously pleased to difficult matter to say where in China 'palm oil' might not be judiciously ombe Her Majesty's Consul for the Consular. ployed. As it is, the delegates are prepared to spend a very large sum of money The Queon has also been graciously pleased in furthering their plans. Three private Williams they are charged with having to appoint Byron Bronan. Esq., now gentlemen going out to China for a few months, either on business or pleasure, might conveniently perform the journey for less than £1,000; twenty times that amount has been taken, and the purpose for which this enormous sum is to be used will not require much explanation from any one who has had experience of the ways of official underlings in China. The travellers will still find ample opportunities of spending their money if they want them : Japan advices were received on the 26th but they will spend it in vain, and Herr via San Francisco. The Messageries | von Brandt will exercise his great personal Maritimes steamer Iranuaddy, with the and official influence in vain : the delegates will return without securing the loan or the contracts they want, and, unless comething now unforeseen occurs, they will not obtain the right to float any loan, however small, or any contract, however unimportant. This, there is the best reason to believe. is the present determination of the only Chinese officials who could enter even on he preliminary negotiations. It is right that I should point out here-for some misapprehension appears to exist. on the subject—that it was distinctly stated, in the first instance, that the project was at present a proposal and nothing more. It was stated, too, that a very eminent financial house had lent it a certain measure of countenance; but it was not suggested that the ingenious plan of present and prospective English trade was clearly understood by the firm in question. And perhaps not the least useful result of the discussion of the plan has been to demonstrate to financial mon in England the national danger that lurks behind innocent-looking schemes of this nature Probably in the present case the English supporters of the German bank. Mossrs Krapp, and the others, have seen reason to reconsider their position and to withdraw from a project which will have consequences to which no one would believe them willing man syndicate has passed away, it is earneastly to be hoped that British merchants will lay the lesson of the scheme well to heart and lose no time in devising some means by which they may be better prepared to meet similar designs in fature. A more active and immediate interest in commercial matters on the part of our diplomatic and consular officials, especially in the Far East, has been suggested, and the manner in which the suggestion was received shows that the same idea has occurred to many others. The charms of the fiere fighting around the la haute politique are more attractive than the wants of commorce, and it is, perhaps, difficult to descend from the lefty regions. where the game of politics is played to the ten thousand men. General Warnet wears life. But Consuls, at any rate, are mainly commercial agents, and trade has a right to expect from them all the help they can give it. It is for morchants thomselves and their chambers of commerce to point out what they want in any direction in order, to be placed on an equality with other nations. The Foreign Office has never shown itself irresponsive to the demands of the mercantile communities, and t is with the latter that the move now rests. If they are dissatisfied with the general attitude of our Consuls towards trade, let them point out what they want. The cry about German officials in the East is a loud and general one. In a late issue an excellent and moderate Eastern journal. the Japan Weekly Mail. commences an article in this way :- We have alluded more than once to the almost wholly unprecedented methods at present adopted by German officials to promote the interests of their country's commerce in the East. - It is obvious that our own officials must bestir themselves to neutralize, as far as may be. the effects of the unprecedented methods here referred to; but it is for Lancashire. Yorkshire, Glasgow, Belfast, and the Midands to indicate how their wants, under these new circumstances, may best be met by our representatives in the Far East.
